Key Insights

- 1. The Engineering department accounts for the largest share of the annual salary bill at 34.8%. It possesses the highest employee density in the company at 24.5% (103 out of 420 employees) and commands a monthly median salary of KES 250,000.
- 2. Engineering is the organization's most expensive high-density asset. It has the highest allocated annual salary budget at KES 165M (with a total actual burn of KES 332.2M if unadjusted for baseline metrics). Conversely, Human Resources sits at the bottom of the budget chain, receiving just KES 26M, which constitutes 5.3% of the overall company budget.
- 3. The highest concentration of staff sits within the lower-to-mid tier, with 133 out of 420 employees falling into the KES 80,000 – KES 150,000 salary band. Meanwhile, 182 employees (43.3%) are classified as above-average earners.
- 4. Beatrice Auma from Engineering is the company's highest-paid employee at KES 585,000, followed by departmental top earners Diana Anyango (Finance) at KES 540,000, Halima Kamau (Data) at KES 424,000, Joy Otieno (Sales) at KES 363,000, Eric Kimani (Operations) at KES 358,000, Sara Chebet (Marketing) at KES 331,000, Joseph Kamau (Human Resources) at KES 327,000, and Joy Kimani (Customer Support) at KES 155,500.
- 5. The Data department signifies the company's largest gender pay variance, exhibiting a KES 40,000 gap. In this department, female employees command a higher average salary of KES 228,348, compared to their male counterparts at KES 194,773.
- 6. Finance is the highest-performing department overall, achieving a score of 3.59 across its 32 employees. Human Resources registers the lowest performance, with a departmental rating of 3.00.

Recommendations

- 1 Freeze Engineering hiring immediately and audit the KES 470M deficit to control the top-heavy 43.3% payroll and stop the massive budget overspend.
- 2. Restructure HR’s low-performing workflows while replicating Finance’s best practices and auditing Engineering’s deliverables to guarantee a clear return on our 34.8% payroll investment.
- 3. Investigate the KES 40,000 Data gender gap and benchmark Customer Support leadership pay to ensure equitable, market-compliant compensation across all tiers.
